Objects made by artisans have a certain hand that machine made products simply cannot replicate. Aside from a higher level of quality, pieces made by craftsmen (and craftswomen) somehow exude the pride of work that goes into them. I also love that each piece is unique in some way.

What does Made in Italy mean to you?

To me, "Made in Italy" is synonymous with quality and artistry. I think of decorative arts that have been thoughtfully designed with aesthetics in mind. Italian designs are generally cutting edge despite being from a people so rooted in tradition. I love that balance

Design Approach and Philosophy

My goal is to happily surprise my clients by giving them what they want but on a level of sophistication and luxury they never imagined before... No matter who they are. I'm interested in all periods of design and decoration, believing that a mix of styles is what makes a room chic and comfortable. A home should reflect the people who live there and respect the context of the given architecture, with rooms that are fresh and tastefully put together as opposed to "decorated." I love to propose the unexpected, I tend to obsess over paint colors, and I adore couture-like detailing that may go unnoticed by anyone except the owner or the occasional visitor with a discerning eye. These things are what make the designs I do for my clients truly custom. No two projects are ever alike

What is the one element of design you can't live without?

Artwork! Artwork is what really customizes a home and it says so much about the occupants. Whether it's a de Kooning, a Renaissance masterpiece, or something your kid did in a nice frame, putting art that you love around your home is essential and brings every room to life.

What is in your opinion the ultimate luxury?

Ironed sheets on a freshly made bed every night would be the ultimate luxury for me. It makes me sigh to think about it!
